The Raise the Wage Act Would Help Close the Gender Pay Gap

Increasing the minimum wage to $15 by 2025 will give nearly 20 million women a raise

The Raise the Wage Act will disproportionately benefit female workers. Nearly 6 in ten workers earning the current federal minimum wage are women.

According to independent analysis, the Raise the Wage Act will give nearly 20 million women a raise, which is 26.7 percent of working women in the United States. This includes:

- 32.7 percent of single parents, many of whom are women, and
- 19.5 percent of women of color.

The Raise the Wage Act will narrow the gender pay gap. Evidence shows that raising the minimum wage is a step toward pay equity. In states where the minimum wage is at or above $8.25 an hour, the gender wage gap is 41 percent smaller than states where the minimum wage is lower.

By guaranteeing that tipped workers are paid the full federal minimum wage, the Raise the Wage Act will address a key driver of pay disparity. Two-thirds of tipped workers are women, and female tipped workers make less than their male counterparts. One fair wage states have a 33 percent smaller gender wage gap in tipped occupations.